Co. Louth Golf Club - Baltray

Course: Links Length: 7,031 yards Par: 72

Located at Baltray, formerly a fisherman's village at the mouth of the River Boyne, north of the medieval town of Drogheda, Co Louth Golf Club was established in 1892. The golf course sits on a 190 acre site of seaside links terrain and has built a reputation of being one of the finest and most enjoyable courses in Ireland. The present layout remains largely unchanged from the design laid out by renowned course architect Tom Simpson in 1938.

The course has two nine hole loops. A remarkable feature of the layout as it winds its way through the dunes is that the player seldom feels that any two holes play in exactly the same direction.

Consistently ranked among the Top 10 courses in Ireland, this classic Links has hosted many top amateur and professional events, most notably the Irish Open in 2014 and 2019.
